THE UP-TO-DATE GROCER

AROUND THE TOWN

Mr. P. Guarhardt and family left for California on Monday.

Work is being rushed on John Liesemer's new block west of Studer's store.

Fred Hunter paid a visit to friends in Stettler on Saturday returning on Sunday.

Hembing & Ruby have had the largest sign in Didsbury painted on their fire wall.

The Alexandra Hotel has installed an electric fire alarm going on every floor in the house.

John Borscht returned to Chesiter, Ontario, on Thursday and expects to return shortly with his family.

W. R. Vogel, the new photographer, will be open for business on Sept. 13th, in his studio over the Didsbury Furniture Store.

Dr. Huriburt of Manitowaning, Ont., who is on a trip through the west looking for a location, spent Sunday in Didsbury. He left for the north on Monday.

A confirmation class is being organized by Rev. Mr. Shore in connection with the Church of England. The bishop will visit the congregation next month.

C. Hiebert, M.P.P., has again shown his usual good sense by buying a cushion-tired buggy from H. P. Ulrich. The Canada
Carriage line still takes the lead.

A pot of varnish caught fire at Hembing & Ruby's place of business Thursday noon causing quite a stir for a few moments. No damage resulted, except that caused by smoke.

P. W. Toews, who has been visiting Mr. Boose at Sunnyslope, has bought a farm there and has gone back to Manitoba to fetch up his effects. He expects to be back again next month.

J. Hugel, who has been employed with Studer & Co. for some time, has accepted a position as traveller for the McCormick Biscuit Co., and takes over his new duties at the end of the month.

Work was delayed on the new school at the beginning of the week because of lack of material which should have come from Calgary. The bad weather has also delayed the workmen in the last few days.

Owing to the fact that I have made a change in my business those who are concerned will please note that all accounts due me should be settled and my account rendered on or before 18th September.—I. D. FEHR.

Ray Pearson, who had to have his leg amputated some weeks ago and who was taken to the Calgary Hospital, was brought home last Friday. His many friends will be glad to hear that he is improving as well as can be expected.

A carload of machinery arrived here last week for the flour mill and Mr. Weber expects to receive the remainder in a short time.
The elevator in connection with the mill is completed and the engine house is well under way. The name of the flour mill is "Maple Leaf."

A gun club is being organized by the young men of the town.

Eat Royal Blue Biscuits. They're the best. Made in Calgary from Alberta
wheat.

Spring and red winter wheat are now quoted at 77 cents at the Didsbury elevator.

Church of England service in Hembing's Hall on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Mr. J. Liesemer has been appointed bounty man for coyotes and wolves for this district.

Miss A. C. Melrose acted as one of the judges at the gold medal elevation contest held by the W.C.T.U. at Olds last week.

Butter and eggs both show an advance in price over last week.
The former brings 20 cents and the latter 22 cents a pound.

Rev. Mr. Smith of Olds and
Rev. Mr. Shore of Didsbury, Church of England ministers, exchanged pulpits on Sunday last.

W. R. Griffith of Calgary, assistant manager to Mr. Bull of the Bell Telephone Co., was in town in the interests of the company this week.

Mr. C. H. Bennet, manager of the Bank of Hamilton at Battleford, and wife, spent a few days with his sister, Mrs. R. B. Martin, the latter end of last week.

Eat Royal Blue Biscuits. They're the best. Made in Calgary from Alberta
wheat.

D. W. Trotter of Edmonton and
W. Trotter of Shegwayndah were Didsbury visitors a few days last week with their friend, Fred Hunter. They are on a pleasure trip to the coast.

Mrs. Jessie Cassel and Mrs.
Geo. Istand, who have been visiting
Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Detweiler for the last few weeks, leave on Saturday for Edmonton on their way home to Berlin, Ontario.

Rev. J. G. Shearer, secretary of the Dominion Lord's Day Alliance, will deliver an address in the interests of the work in the Evangelical church, Didsbury, on Friday evening, Sept. 20th, at 8 o'clock. All are welcome.

H. Heipei and Fred Peters of Stratford, Ontario, have been visiting the former's sister, Mrs.
Metz, for a few days and incidentally looking over some land with the intention of buying as they are well satisfied with the look of the country.

Monday was the Jewish New Year (Rosh-ha-Shona) and was celebrated by all the local Jews.
The date is fixed by the phases of the moon or upon the first day of the month called Gisri, which is the seventh month in the Jewish calendar. The new year is 5668.

Eat Royal Blue Biscuits. They're the best. Made in Calgary from Alberta
wheat.

A well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Canadian Bible Society was held on Wednesday night in the Presbyterian church.
Rev. Mr. Bowen, secretary of the Alberta Canadian Bible Society was present and addressed the meeting. Fred Hunter was elected president and Miss Good, secretary treasurer, for the ensuing year. The public is cordially invited to become members of the society by paying a membership fee of $1 and having the privilege of helping in the good work.

Help Your Board of Trade

At a public meeting held some time ago several of our townspeople pledged themselves to become members of the Board of Trade by signing their names and promising to pay one dollar for membership fee. We are sorry to hear that out of some thirty signatures obtained only about a dozen have paid their fee.

This is poor support to the men who were placed on the executive committee and who are giving their time week after week to further the best interests of the town from a business standpoint, and it is also unfair to expect them to try and do anything unless they get a little financial support from those who do not wish to take the time or bother with this work but who are perfectly willing to let others shoulder the responsibility.

The question may be asked what is the Board of Trade doing?

So far a great deal of preliminary work has been done toward getting the approaches to town fixed up. The census has also been taken, and a number of other matters taken up that will take some time to work out but which will eventually be for the best interests of the town at large.

All this needs a little financial as well as moral support, and unless this is forthcoming the merchants and others interested cannot expect to reap any benefit from a Board of Trade.

All this needs a little financial as well as moral support, and unless this is forthcoming the merchants and others interested cannot expect to reap any benefit from a Board of Trade.

It is now up to you to pay your little dollar to either of the following gentlemen who will give you credit for same: J. E. A. Macleod, W. H. Smith, Noah B. Good, O. Williams, O. W. Hempling or H. E. Osmond.

Buy in Didsbury

No, gentle reader, this is not an article on the merits of and advantages to be derived by buying real estate or farm property in Didsbury or surrounding country, but is a simple plea for the residents of this town and tributary country to be not over hasty in sending their cold cash out of the country to secure some of the alleged bargains advertised in the Simpson and Eaton catalogues which have been received during the month.

Nh doubt many of our readers have come into possession of these price lists and it is not at all surprising that the careful householders has been studying them religiously. We would ask those people to read as thoroughly the advertisements in the Pioneer and compare the prices of goods offered by Didsbury merchants.

The person who buys goods of a mail-order concern in a distant city receives the goods by mail after having paid for them in advance; and no matter what the quality may be his purchase is absolute and he has no redress if the quality is not up to the standard.

Would it not be well for those who when they have a little cash to think of the merchant who has given them credit for the last year or two. Would Eaton have used them the same way?

local merchants do much to help build up the town and country. They all pay taxes. They help to support our churches and school. They pay white man's wages—to women as well as men. Their places of business are not like the sweatshops of the east. Remember then these things when you have cash to spend this fall. You may want credit again. Use them white and you will find that they will use the same.

Labor Riot in Vancouver

Despatches from Vancouver state that some hours on Saturday and Sunday morning last that city was in the hands of an anti-Asian mob, particularly anti-Japanese.

The fire brigade turned out to help the police restore order but were afraid to turn on the water for fear the mob would fire the Oriental quarters.

As a result of the riot the Orientals have taken revenge by going out in strike at all the hotels which has resulted in practically tying up hotel business.

Sixty Japanese stores and homes are damaged and six Japanese injured. The damage will be $24,000 which the Vancouver City Council will ask the Ottawa government to pay.

Eat Royal Blue Biscuits. They're the best. Madin Calgary from Alberta wheat.

Twenty-six residents of Calgary were up before the police magistrate on Monday refusing to pay tax. They were fined $1.50 and costs.

Olds' board of trade will likely secure expert opinion on the matter of developing water power on the Little Red Deer River.

CHAPTER XXXII.

It was early May and a bright morning in Hillsborough. There were lines of stores and houses on either side of the main thoroughfare from the river to Mooseshaven, a long, low white building that faced the public square. The town of its citizens was rising and gazing down the street, as if sighting over gun barrels at the bridge, were wont to reckon the distance "high on to forty foot." There were "Boston Stores" and "Great Emporiums" and "Fancy Goods" and "Woolen Mills" in that forty rods of Hillsborough. Midway was a little white building, its eaves within reach of one's hand, its table on the line of the sidewalk overhanging, which, from a crane above the door, was a big golden spire. In the windows were the usual children and ladies' hats and skeins of thread, and blue shades drawn high from 7 o'clock in the morning until dark. It was the little shop of Ruth Tole, a house of fate on the way from happening to history.

Travelers were scattered about and set on their way; reputations were made over and often trimmed with excellent taste and discrimination.

Ruth Tole was behind the counter, sorting threads. She was a vision of middle life and commanding presence of few and few words. The door of the little shop was ajar, and near it a woman was knitting. She had a postion favorable for eye and ear. She could see all who passed on either side of the way and, if she willed, or moved in the direction of the shop. In the window she bore the familiar name of Lize. She had been talking about that old case of Riley Brooke and the Widow Glover.

"Looks to me," said she thoughtfully as she tucked a spool with a knitting needle into the pocket of her apron of him. "He's a deal more respectable."

Take a partner with his teeth pulled," said a woman who stood by the counter buying a spool of thread.

"Aint you heard how they made up?" said she.

"Well, that old tinker gave 'em both a good talking to," said the customer.

"He brings 'em face to face, and he says to him, 'In the day of the judgment God I'll mind the look o' you wife,' and then he says the same to me."

"Singular man!" said comely Lize.

"He never rebuked that bank, either more'n I did."

"Men ain't up to claim a sin that don't belong to 'em. That's my opinion."

"He did it to shield another."

"Sidney Trove?" was the half whispered query of the sister Lize.

"Trove, no," said the other quickly.

"It was that old man with a gray beard who never said a word to anybody an' used to sit in the tinker's shop."

"She was interrupted by a stout woman of middle age who flittered in, breathing heavily, under a look of pallor and agitation.

"Sh-h-h!" said she, lifting a large hand, and sank upon a chair, fanning herself. She said nothing for a little.

"What is it, Bet, for mercy's sake?" said Lize.

"Have you heard the news?" said she that was called Bet.

"Land sakes, I know it all the others."

She uttered a moment of suspense, during which the newcomer sat biting her under lip, with a merry smile.

"You're too provoking," said the sister Lize impatiently. "Why do you keep us hanging by the eyebrows?"

"Sh-h-h," said the dead sister Bet again.

Another woman had just stepped by the door, "a scowl on her face, a scowl in her eye."

"She was interrupted by the sister Lize.

"It's that horrible Kate Tredder, Mercy! Is she coming in?"

"She is, I am. Long since she had ceased to enjoy credit or confidence at the little shop."

"Nice day," said she.

The sister Lize moved impatiently and picked up her work. This untimely entrance had left her "hanging by the eyebrows" and red with anxiety.

She gave the newcomer a sweeping glance, said "Good day, Yes!" The sister Lize grew serious and began tapping the floor with her toe.

"I've been clear round the square," said Mrs. Tredder, "an' I guess I'll sit awhile. I didn't do a thing today, an' I don't believe I'll do a thing after dinner. Miss Tredder, I may give you another yard of that red silk ribbon."

She sat by the counter, and Miss Tole sniffed a little and began to measure the ribbon. She was deeply if secretly offended by this intrusion.

"What's the news?" said the newcomer, turning to the sister Bet.

"'E'en, ye know she was pert and handsome, and he tends to take no notice."

The sisters looked from one to another and gave up to gleeful smiles, but Ruth was if anything a bit drier than before.

"Well, he brought her some flowers, and she began to get better. Then he took her out to ride. One night about 10 o'clock the nurse comes into the room suddenly and finds him on his knees before the widow, kissing her dress an' talking all kinds of nonsense."

"Here! Stop a minute," said the sister Lize, who had not dropped her knitting and begun to fan herself. "You take my breath away." The dame was too important for hasty consideration.

"Makin' love?" said the customer.

"I should think likely," said the other, whereupon the three began to laugh again.

"'Ere go on," said the sister Lize, laughing forward.

"There he kneel, kissing her dress," the narrator continued.

"Why didn't he kiss his face?"

"Because she wouldn't let him, I suppose."

"Oh," said the others nodding their heads thoughtfully.

"When the nurse came," the sister Lize continued, "the widow went to a desk and wrote a letter and brought it Dick. Then say the widow, says she: 'You take this to my uncle in Boston. If you can make him give his consent I'll be glad to see you again.'

"Dick he rushed off at very evenin' an' took the cars to Madrid. What do you suppose the letter said?"

"The sister Serene igno' to what man is judged to extraneous while a man stands to rise or fall rather than to what he hides within than by what he shows outside."

"But though man has failed to sorry drabs and grays and monkeys and apes, and the like, he is not to be blamed. The tailor still has to know his business better than the dressmaker, and if a woman wishes to be particularly well and expensively clothed she must go to a man's tailor who makes women dressing a side show in his business."

A NOVEL KEY RACK.

Household Keys Suspended From Rack in the Hall.

The English custom of a key rack in the hall, in which all the keys of the household are suspended, is fast gaining favor in American country houses. A pretty and novel improvement on the plain square of wood covered with hooks, is made as follows:

"Take a plain piece of wood about an inch and a half square, the length to be determined by the number of keys to be held, and paint, stain or enamel it. On the underside screw small brass hooks for the keys to hang upon and suspend from the top by a piece of ribbon, a loop on the top end, so as to enclose the wood fasten a rosette of ribbon with streamers hanging down. The wood will look very well painted white, and it is a good plan to paint in colors to match the ribbon, the number of colors to be determined by the number of keys that are to hang. Tasseled cords might be used instead of the ribbon already suggested. The former, in fact, would be more serviceable, inasmuch as it would not require renewing quite so often.

"So I say," this from the other, who was leaning toward the smiling mouth of the woman.

"What was it?" said the sister Lize.

"'Kicked him downstairs,'" said the sister Lize.

"The two whistled."

"'Tough enough for him.' It was the verdict of the little shopkeeper sharply spoken, as she went on with her work.

"So I say," this from the other, who was leaning toward the smiling mouth of the woman.

"'Hed better not come back here,'" said the sister Lize.

"He never will probably."

"Who employed the widow?"

"Nobody knows," said the sister Serene. "But she left town she went to a certain cash desk to come from Riley Brooke. Some think Martha Vaughan herself knows all about it. Sh-h-h! There goes Sidney Trove."

"Ain't he splendid looking?"

Ruth Tole had opened the door, and they were now observing the street. She was wearing a red silk ribbon.

"One of these days there'll be some tall lovemaking up there at the Widow Vaughn's," said Lize.

"It's hard to be behind the door."

"I wouldn't," said the sister Serene.

"You wouldn't?"

"I'd rather be up next to the young man." A merry laugh and then a sigh from Lize, who looked a bit dreamy.

(To Be Continued)

Wonders of Machinery.

Dependence upon machinery is becoming almost an instinct among us. Ruth Tole regarded them with a look of firmness, which seemed to say, "Sh-h-h! If she doesn't tell."

"Well," said the sister Serene, "you know the little boy who worked that came awhile ago to the Mooseshaven—the one that wore the splendid black silk the night o' the ball?"

"Yes."

"She was a detective"—this in a whisper.

"What?" said the other two awesomely.

"A detective."

The sister Serene was now laughing.

"It's ridiculous!" she remarked.

"Go on," said the others, and one of them added, "Land sakes, don't stop now."

"Well, she got sick the other day and sent for a lawyer, an' who do you suppose it was?"

"I'm dumb," said Ruth Tole. The words had broken away from her, and she covered her mouth quickly and began to look out of the window. The speaker had begun to laugh again.

"'Twas Dick Roberts," she went on.

"I don't believe I'll do a thing after dinner, Miss Tredder, I may give you another yard of that red silk ribbon."

She sat by the counter, and Miss Tole sniffed a little and began to measure the ribbon. She was deeply if secretly offended by this intrusion.
